

TWO INDICTED ON ELECTRIC TRADE TRUST LAW CHARGES

Orville E. Jennings and Chester H. Chapline Named in True Bills Charging Conspiracy to Restrain Business.

ACTION FOLLOWS INQUIRY BY STATE

President of Workers' Union and Contractor Alleged to Have Formed Association to Increase Cost of Installation.

Orville E. Jennings, a vice president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' Union, and Chester H. Chapline, an electrical contractor, were indicted yesterday charged with conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the State anti-trust laws.

Jennings and Chapline were taken into custody by a Deputy Sheriff at the Olive-Plaza Building shortly before noon today. Accompanied by their attorney, Lawrence McDaniel, they were taken to the Circuit Attorney's office and permitted to wait there pending the arrival of bondsmen. Bond was fixed at $10,000 each.

The State grand jury, after several weeks' investigation, voted the indictments against the two men, charging them with conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the State anti-trust laws.

The organizations, of which Jennings is president and Chapline vice president and treasurer, collect $2.80 a day from each contractor for every union man in his employ, to pay for life and annuity insurance that is furnished to all members of the local union, the contractor and all his employees, including those not members of the union.

The indictments voted late yesterday are the culmination of several weeks' inquiry by the grand jury into conditions prevailing in the electrical industry. For years the electrical contractors have submitted with little or no protest to demands for increased wages, shorter hours, "special assessments" and collective agreements proposed by fellow contractors, who at the time were favored by those in power.

Business Agent Arthur Schading, who had imposed an arbitrary 2-cent-an-hour levy upon contractors for each union man in their employ, was deposed early in 1929 with the aid of Jennings. With the promise of a "square deal" by Jennings, the contractors began to look forward to a more peaceful and profitable era.

Enforced New Wage Agreement. A few months later the members of the Electrical Employers' Association were amazed to learn that new wage contracts with the local union to go into effect July 15, 1929, included not only a wage increase for union labor from $12 to $13.20 a day, but also a clause by which the contractor was bound to pay $2.80 a day, additional to the newly organized Electrical Protective Association.

Chapline, representing the contractors, and Jennings the local union, drew up the new wage agreement and presented it at a meeting of contractors. Their reply, according to witnesses, to a few contractors who made half-hearted objections, was: "Take it or else. . . . With this restriction that no workmen would be furnished them unless the agreement with the union was consummated."

MERAMEC VALLEY BANK ROBBED OF $3500 IN HOLDUP

Two Masked Men Force Only Three Members of Staff Present to Kneel Behind Partition.

LOOT OPEN SAFE AND TELLERS' DESKS

Flee in Ford Sedan With Illinois License, Which They Had Left Standing Outside Depository.

The Meramec Valley Bank, in Valley Park, St. Louis County, was robbed of about $3500 by two masked men this morning.

Entering shortly after 10 o'clock, they encountered H. E. Vance, cashier, at his desk behind a grating partition, and Miss Emma O'Brien, bookkeeper, at her desk in the same section, while the cashier's father, W. J. Vance, vice president of the bank, was in his office behind the employees' compartment. No one else was present.

One robber went to the door in the partition and pointed a revolver at the younger Vance, saying to him, warningly: "All right."

The other pointed a revolver through the teller's window at Miss O'Brien, who is the daughter of City Marshal James O'Brien of Valley Park. Then the first one opened the door, which was not locked, and made the three members of the bank staff kneel on the floor behind the partition.

Remaining between five and 10 minutes, the robbers took all the money the bank had from the tellers' desks and the open safe. The funds were chiefly in currency. As the robbers departed with the money in a flour sack, a few dollars in silver slipped out through a hole and they left it on the floor. The loss was insured.

Cool and deliberate in demeanor, the robbers had little to say but one remarked to the bank workers: "Keep quiet and we won't hurt you."

They appeared to be between 30 and 35 years old and wore blue jumpers over their street clothes, with white handkerchiefs tucked in their faces.

The bank is at Marshall and Frisco avenues, across the tracks from the Frisco railway station, and near the Meramec River. There is little traffic past the corner. The robbers had a blue Ford sedan, bearing an Illinois license, standing outside. One of them preceded the other out, to start the motor. In driving away, they went over the tracks and east on Marshall avenue, but to get out of the town it would have been necessary for them to double back to Dougherty Ferry or Meramec Station roads.

Known as the "Hymn for Airmen," it was written by Roxane Seabury Wright, formerly of Chicago but now a Californian, and is dedicated to the late Bishop Charles Palmerston Anderson in memory of his son, Lt. ### AQUITANIA DOCKS DAY LATE AFTER A STORMY VOYAGE Prize-Winning Pekingese Rushed from Pier to Dog Show at Boston by Airplane.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—With 732 persons and Sutherland Avenue Hanchilli, a prize winning Pekingese dog, as passengers, the Cunard liner Aquitania docked today after a stormy voyage from Southampton.

Mountainous seas, which necessitated throttling down its engines to six knots for periods of six and 12 hours, brought the ship in a day late and resulted in an air-raid on the pier for Hanchilli.

Mrs. Richard Quigley, wife of State Senator Quigley of Lockhaven, Pa., purchased Hanchilli in London and planned to enter it in the dog show in Boston. Hanchilli's class was to be judged at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Quigley arranged for her manager to meet the ship at the pier, take Hanchilli to Newark and rush the dog to Boston by airplane.

OFFICIAL KILLED ON R-101 FORESAW POSSIBILITY OF DEATH

Lord Thomson, Air Minister, Scribbled Will on Single Sheet of Paper 48 Hours Before Crash.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Nov. 7.—Lord Thomson, the Air Minister, who was killed in the crash of the dirigible R-101, recognized the possibility that he might never return from the voyage to India which ended in disaster near Beauvais, France, on Oct. 5.

In his will, filed today, he left all he owned to his brother, Col. Roger Gordon Thomson, "in the event of my death during the flight of the R-101 to India and return."

The document, hastily scribbled on a single sheet of paper, was dated Oct. 5, less than 48 hours before the dirigible crashed. The estate was estimated at about 1737 pounds sterling, about $8685.

F. McWade, chief of the inspection department at Cardington, testified yesterday after Sir John Simon, head of the inquiry board, had read his memorandum recommending alterations in construction of the dirigible.

Col. V. C. Richmond, also killed in the crash, noted that leaks in the gas bags were decreasing the R-101's lifting power.

Sir John declared he could not understand why these documents had not been produced before, but it was explained later that they had been put aside for copying at the Air Ministry and had been overlooked when papers relevant to the inquiry were forwarded to the board.

4 STOWAWAYS 5 DAYS AT SEA CLEAN SHAVEN AND WELL FED

Customs Officers at Baltimore to Investigate Discovery of Men in Ship's Lifeboat.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 7.—Clean-shaven and well fed after five days at sea, four stowaways were found in a lifeboat yesterday by customs inspectors on the British steamer Euphorbia, arriving from Havana. So well cared for were they that customs officials detained the entire crew until an investigation could be made to determine whether the stowaways had been aided by anyone on the journey.

The officers said the four appeared as though they had been in the boat only a few hours, adding their clothing was no; even rumpled. One of the four admitted, they said, he had been on the boat since Oct. 21.

It is thought the men went aboard the boat while it was moored at Havana before sailing for Baltimore Nov. 2.

FUGITIVE THEATER TREASURER AND FRIEND CAUGHT

J. V. Noel and H. J. Werner, Who Took $8685 From the Missouri, Arrested in New Orleans.

TRAILED BY SPLURGE IN NIGHT CLUBS

Detectives Find $4300 in Cash, Remainder of Loot, in Expensive Apartment—To Waive Extradition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7.—The trail of the bright lights came to an end here today for two former employees of the Missouri Theater in St. Louis, who started out less than a week ago to lead a gay life on funds stolen from the theater.

They are James V. Noel, 24 years old, and his roommate, Harold J. Werner, 21, who were arrested by New Orleans detectives this morning at their rooms in one of the city's most expensive apartment buildings.

Until their departure from St. Louis last Sunday night, taking with them $8685 of the theater's funds, Noel had been employed as treasurer of the theater and Werner as head usher.

Detectives here trailed them by their lavish expenditures at night clubs and gambling houses and raided their apartment. They admitted their identity, police said, and said they would return willingly to St. Louis. In their rooms the police found $4300 in cash which the youths said was all that was left of the money they took from the theater.

The two young men, as is known, checked out Sunday night at the Biltmore Hotel, 3442 Washington boulevard, St. Louis, and the next day officers of the theater found that the receipts for Saturday night and Sunday were not in the company's safe. They estimated about $10,500 was missing.

Noel told the New Orleans police they took a train Sunday night for New Orleans and upon arrival here went to a leading hotel. Later they engaged the apartment in which they were arrested, paying $150 for the first month's rent.

They then purchased an automobile and started out to have a good time. They visited several gambling places and night clubs and lost $385 in one gambling house last night. At that time they had attracted attention of the police and were being observed by detectives, who followed them home.

They also said they had spent money liberally on entertaining women.

Took Money for Three Months. Noel said that for three months he had been taking small sums from time to time from the theater's receipts. He estimated his total peculation, with what he took Sunday night, would amount to $10,000. He said his salary was $30 a week and that of Werner was $25 a week.

Publisher and Wife Living Apart

EDWARD B. McLEAN and MRS. EVALYN LUCILLE WALSH McLEAN.

EDWARD B. McLEAN IS SUED BY WIFE FOR $10,000 A MONTH

She Has Been Separated From Husband for Year—Both Socially Prominent—They Once Owned Bad Luck Hope Diamond.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—A suit to compel Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, to pay $10,000 a month for the support of his wife and children was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme Court yesterday by his wife, Mrs. Evalyn Lucille Walsh McLean.

The complaint against the publisher, who also is connected with the Cincinnati Enquirer, said he and Mrs. McLean had been separated for more than a year. Attorneys for the latter said, however, the suit was in no sense a divorce proceeding.

Mrs. McLean told the Court that she and her husband "had an income ranging as high as $10,000 a year" he has failed and refused to maintain his wife and three minor children.

She asked that McLean be restrained from receiving any further income from the estate of his father, the late John R. McLean, until he pays regularly $4000 a month for support of the 75-acre family residence here, known as Friendship, and costs of the present suit and other expenses.

In describing her husband's financial position, Mrs. McLean said he had three completely furnished private residences in Washington; an apartment at the Ritz in New York; a $200,000 stock farm and $800,000 worth of horses and cattle; a $30,000 duck hunting camp on the Potomac River, and maintained four of the most expensive automobiles.

Mrs. McLean told the Court she had used $50,000 of her private income in improving Friendship and had been forced to encroach on the principal of her estate to maintain her children.

McLEAN and Bride Elopel to Avoid Elaborate Wedding.

The marriage in 1908 of Miss Evelyn Walsh, daughter of Thomas F. Walsh, multimillionaire Colorado mining man, and Edward B. McLean followed an elopement. Each the heir to a huge fortune, an elaborate wedding befitting the importance of the occasion had been planned. It was to take place at the Walsh home in Washington. But McLean and his fiancée decided to escape all the fuss and ceremony arranged for them, and eloped from Wolhurst, a Walsh estate in Colorado, to Denver, where they were married.

They took up their residence in Washington, and began an active social career. They entertained lavishly and magnificently. When his personal friend, Warren G. Harding, became President, McLean was one of the inner circle of the administration. To a lesser degree was his influence felt in the Congress and "Hoover administration," but his influence, during the Harding regime, continued to be a meeting place for many high government officials.

"Elopement in Salt Industry." McLean was one of the most prominent figures in the salt industry. He was a member of the Salt Institute, and was a member of the Salt Producers' Association. He was a member of the Salt Producers' Association, and was a member of the Salt Producers' Association.

When Albert B. Fall was under investigation, the publisher asked to do him a good turn by saying that the "Fall case" was a "salt case." McLean said that he had changed his story and said he had given the Secretary of the Interior $100,000 in check as a loan, but that the check had been returned to him unsigned.

McLean said that he had been "blackmailed" by the investigation of the Fall case, and that he had been "blackmailed" by the investigation of the Fall case, and that he had been "blackmailed" by the investigation of the Fall case.

MAN KILLED, GAMBLING HOUSE DOOR GUARD SHOT

Pistol and Machine Gun Fight Starts With Refusal to Check Weapons Before Entering Hyde Park Club in Venice.

SLAIN EX-CONVICT'S COMPANION ESCAPES

Pearl (Chicken) Ridge, Ex-Convict, Loses Life and Joseph S. Behan, Former Policeman, Is Seriously Wounded.

A man was killed and another gravely wounded in a machine gun and pistol fight at 2 a. m. today at the Hyde Park Club, notorious gambling house on Main street in Venice.

Persons in the resort who rushed out after the firing had stopped found on a filling station lot near by the body of Pearl Ridge, also known as "Chicken" Ridge, a resident of Madison, former convict and a frequenter of the gambling house.

As they gathered around the body, Joseph S. Behan, doorkeeper of the gambling house, who had been a participant in the fight, collapsed. He had been shot in the abdomen and is in St. John's Hospital in a serious condition.

Behan, a former St. Louis policeman, said later that Ridge and a man known to him as Cyrus Smith had visited the gambling house a minute before the fight began, had refused to surrender their pistols at the door and had opened fire when he insisted on searching them, according to prevailing gambling house custom.

Behan said he thought he had wounded Ridge's companion in the ensuing fight. As Ridge and the other man fled Behan was joined by other guards of the house and a submachine gun was used in a brief but hot fight on the sidewalk in front of the place.

Partner Kidnaped in August. The Hyde Park Club, a block north of the McKinley Bridge eastern approach, is operated by John T. Soy, John P. Connor and Walter Butler, all residents of St. Louis. Soy was kidnaped last August and was held for more than a week by gangsters who had seized him on the McKinley Bridge and taken him to Chicago. A ransom of $30,000 was said to have been paid for his release.

A woman resident of Venice who declined to allow the use of her name, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Ridge fought the gambling house defenders from behind a parked automobile until he was finally hit.

"My daughter and I were awakened by firing," she said. "We ran to the window and saw several men run from the front door of the Hyde Park Club across the street. They were chasing a man we recognized as 'Chicken' Ridge, who was a cripple and ran with a decided limp."

They were all shooting at once. Ridge was firing back at them as he ran. The men from the gambling house had pistols except one. He was firing a machine gun and there was a terrific lot of noise.

"Ridge jumped from the sidewalk about 200 feet north of the club and from behind a parked automobile kept firing. The men from the club stopped running after him, but they continued to fire."

Eye-Witness Describes Fight. "After a few moments Ridge quit shooting. He put his hands up over his head and stepped from behind the machine. The men from the gambling house fired all the more. He threw his hands up to his face, ran a few feet to the filling station and fell."

"Still the firing went on as the men from the club ran toward him. He didn't move any more and they finally stopped shooting. One or two other men ran out of the place and stood around him at the filling station."

"I slipped on a robe and went across the street. They told me then that 'Big Joe' (Behan) had been shot and that they had taken him to St. John's hospital. I asked one of the men if it had been a holdup and he told me: 'No, they say came into the place with another fellow and they tried to get him.'"

DEMOCRATS GIVE PRESIDENT PLEDGE OF CO-OPERATION

Statement of Seven Party Leaders Asserts Country's Welfare Will Be Placed Above Political Gain.

WILL NOT BLOCK APPROPRIATIONS

Recounts Being Demanded in Close Races on Which Slim Majority of G. O. P. in Congress Rests.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Into the confused congressional situation brought about by the near deadlock as a result of Tuesday's election, seven Democratic leaders today have given a pledge of non-obstruction.

The executive heads of the party and three former Democratic presidential nominees last night issued a statement claiming control of the legislative branch of the Government, but asserting the party would place the welfare of the country and the restoration of prosperity ahead of political advantage and the desire to show power.

Ignoring the latest compilation of results, which gave the Republicans the narrowest of majorities in both Senate and House, they said the Democrats, to the extent of their ability, would resist legislation in the next Congress.

"The Seventy-second Congress will not be an obstructive body," they said. "It will not seek to embarrass the President of the United States, but will be glad to co-operate with him and with members of the opposite party in the House and Senate in every measure that conduces to the welfare of the country."

"There will be no holding up of necessary appropriations, no rejection of fit appointments to important places merely because these appointments are made by a President of the opposite party."

On Heels of Hoover's Expression. Their statement came on the heels of the only expression President Hoover has permitted himself in regard to the election. It was a single sentence:

"The job for the country now is to concentrate on measures of co-operation for economic recovery."

This, he made clear, was the only answer to numerous written inquiries which had been submitted to him by newspaper correspondents in connection with the election.

The Democratic pledge bore the signatures of James M. Cox, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith, the last three presidential candidates of the party; Senator Joseph T. Robinson and Congressman John N. Garner, the party leader in Congress, and John J. Raskob and J. P. Morgan, the executive heads of the Democratic National Committee.

No General Tariff Revision. "No general revision of the tariff, they promised, would be part of the Democratic program. They did not share the criticism of the tariff, however, referring in a qualification to "whatever changes may be considered necessary to rid the present act of its outstanding enormities."

Subject to recounts, the final result of the election today showed: The House: Republicans, 218; Democrats, 216; Farmer-Labor, 1. The Senate: Republicans, 48; Democrats, 47; Farmer-Labor, 1.

Recounts are being demanded on a number of close results on which the Republican majority rests. The Republicans also may seek to take away some seats gone Democratic by a handful of votes.

Even the Senate result still is under the shadow of a possible recount in Minnesota, where Senator Schall was re-elected over strong Democratic opposition.

Brookhart Offers Democrats Aid. From another angle also the administration preponderance is threatened. Senator Brookhart (Rep., Iowa), has offered to aid the Democrats in organizing the Senate, in exchange for adoption of a legislative program suitable to him.

Others from the Western states may join him, he believes. Senator Shipstead of Minnesota, the lone Farmer-Labor member in the chamber, has not pledged himself. In the House also are a number of Western Republicans of insurgent tendencies who might swing the balance of power. All have a year to decide their position, as the Seventy-second Congress, barring an unlikely special session, will meet Dec. 1, 1931. During that time a number of deaths or resignations may alter the standing.

(Text of the statement by Democratic leaders is published elsewhere in this edition of the Post-Dispatch.)

GALLOPING WARRIORS SWEAR FEALTY TO ETHIOPIAN KING

100,000 in Tribal Dress Ride Furiously to Foot of Throne and There Prostrate Themselves.

ADDIS ABABA, Abyssinia, Nov. 8.—One hundred thousand Ethiopian warriors galloped past the newly crowned Emperor Haile Selassie I yesterday in token of their fealty and as a great farewell demonstration for the foreigners from afar who attended the coronation Sunday.

Shouting and gesticulating the hordes of feudal chieftains and tribesmen, attired in tribal dress of shaggy lion manes and armed with lances and swords, swept up before the monarch on beautiful and high spirited horses.

Haile Selassie sat on a golden dais, wearing the uniform of the Commander in Chief of the Ethiopian army. His headgear was made from the mane of a lion.

As they arrived before the dais the warriors of the desert and mountain flung themselves from their steeds and lay prostrate before their ruler, assuring him of their readiness to defend him against all enemies.

The Emperor's foreign guests—including the Americans, H. Murray Jacoby, Addison Southard, Gen. W. W. Harris and Charles L. Cooke—held their breath in amazement as the seething warriors galloped at breakneck speed up the hillside where sat the Emperor, brandishing their weapons and yelling wildly.

While it was known that the demonstration was supposed to be one of fealty, the local authorities took no chances and kept machine guns trained upon the participants from a strategic position. At one point the Emperor's guards, fearing an assault upon their ruler by the screaming horsemen, forced them down hill with lances and bayonets.

Andre Lavarre of Washington, D. C., taking motion pictures for an American travel lecturer, was knocked down in the melee. He was unhurt but his camera was wrecked.

As he rode toward New York, between two detectives, Willard wrote verses on his portable typewriter. One bit of verse was in memory of Miss Harrison, who came as far as Chicago with him. It was a little thing called "Vagant Thoughts," and it concluded pensively:

"So I'm happy that I'm rambling Back to where the sun is shining And I'll never more go driving About my head upon the brain. The other was dedicated to Detective Devlin, of Willard's entourage."

STOCK ACCOUNTS OF TAMMANY LEADERS SOUGHT

Special Prosecutor Is Trying to Locate Those of John F. Curry and 48 Others.

FIRMS ON EXCHANGE ARE ASKED TO AID

M. J. Healy, District Chief, to Go to Trial Nov. 17, on Charge of Accepting $10,000 Bribe.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Brokerage accounts of 49 political chiefs, including Tammany leader John F. Curry, have been sought by the special grand jury investigating the appointment of former Magistrate George F. Ewald.

Hiram C. Todd, special prosecutor under the Attorney-General, said today he had sent letters to houses of both stock and curb exchange asking for records back to 1925, and had received some replies. Most of the letters were sent two weeks ago, he said. Todd did not indicate the nature of the replies.

Among forty-eight others listed in the prosecutor's letters are Amedeo A. Bertini and his wife; Charles L. Kohler, director of the City Budget and leader of Judge Bertini's Assembly district; members of the Curry and Kohler families; Humbert August, sports promoter; Max Wilson, Judge Bertini's former law partner; and Henry M. Schneider, his confidential court attendant.

More Convenient Than Subpoenas. Enclosed in the letters were affidavits to be filled out with the accounts, if any, the firms had of the listed persons since Jan. 1, 1925. The letter concludes with the statement, "I trust this procedure will be more convenient for you than to answer a subpoena."

It was informed that one of the letters had been declined to comment, saying his aides were making a very broad investigation and he was unfamiliar with all the details.

Curry and many of the others listed in the letters had been called before the special grand jury, but refused to waive immunity and testify.

Todd is preparing for the trial of Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader, and Thomas T. Montgomery, ex-convict, had been enjoined temporarily from further activity during the trial.

Former Convict Enjoined. The State Bureau of Securities has announced that Arthur S. Montgomery, ex-convict, had been enjoined temporarily from further activity during the trial.

Montgomery received much publicity as star witness against the former Kings County Judge, W. Bernard Vause, during the jurist's trial on fraud charges.

The letters also called for a list of all the firms which had done business with Montgomery since he was appointed to the position of former Kings County Judge.

Another letter found in Druggan's room, dated Sept. 10 at Hollywood, Fla., and alluded to Capone's home in Palm Island, Fla. It read:

"Dear Friend Terry: 'I would like to know where I could get a list of all the firms which had done business with you on a matter of much importance. You will probably remember me as John Leeger, for whom you went to the front during the season of '27 at Miami.'

"I am now at the above address and you are aware that a certain Party is building a home in this country. I have the best 'in' down here. There are some things I am sure you would appreciate knowing, and rest assured that I can and certainly will be of service to you in any way you want me to be."

"With best regards to Frankie Lake and hoping to hear from you soon, I am your friend, 'I am known here as 'DON B. COLLINS.'"

Druggan is not the only enemy of Capone who is tangled up with history. George (Bugs) Moran, North Side enemy of Capone, forfeited his $10,000 bond yesterday when he failed to appear before Chief Justice Harry Olson on a vagrancy charge. Judge Olson issued a warrant for his arrest.

DRUGGAN, CHICAGO BEER MILLIONAIRE, ORDERED TO COURT

Cited for Contempt by Judge Lyle for Evading Appearance on Charge of Vagrancy.

"PLOT" LETTER FOUND BY POLICE

Plan to Get "the Big Fellow" Apparently Directed at Capone, Found in Rival's Rooms.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Terry Druggan, millionaire beer king and "public enemy," was cited for contempt of court by Municipal Judge Lyle and ordered arrested at the request of Harry S. Ditchburne, Assistant State's Attorney, on the allegation that Druggan has willfully defied the Court concerning various fines which prevented his appearance in court on a charge of vagrancy.

In addition, Druggan faces trial for Federal income tax evasion and has been the object of an intensive hunt in which investigators raided his downtown hotel, finding, they said, a letter hinting at a plot to assassinate "Scarface Al" Capone.

Druggan, however, has not been found. This letter, seized by detectives who raided Druggan's downtown hotel suite and his luxurious North Side apartment yesterday, contained an offer to "take care of the big fellow." Investigators declared "the big fellow" could mean no one but Capone.

Bond Ordered Forfeited. Detectives which indicated, they said, that Druggan was in close touch with criminals in many other parts of the country. Deeds and records also were found which investigators said would disclose Druggan's plan to be one of the wealthiest in Chicago racket.

Judge Lyle announced after examining the letter referring to "the big fellow," that it indicated beyond doubt Druggan planned to have Capone assassinated two days ago. The judge then declared Druggan's $10,000 bond on the vagrancy charge forfeited.

Another letter, the judge said, referred to the kidnaping of an unidentified millionaire in which $40,000 ransom had been paid.

Records were found showing a list of telephone numbers and addresses of houses and papers referring to properties and mortgages. These were turned over to the Government to be used in prosecuting the income-tax evasion indictment against him.

Druggan's physicians pronounced him in a state of mental collapse. He was suffering from a brain ailment and obtained a continuance of the trial recently.

Two revolvers were discovered in his hotel room, and the tapping of a gun was heard in his apartment on the North Side. A cache of ammunition and a machine gun—olled and ready for use.

The quotation from the letter which the raiders took to be a reference to Capone was: "I am in a position to take care of the big fellow. I can do anything you want me to."

The raiders refused to reveal who wrote the letter, but they intimated it was a powerful gangster.

About a "Certain Party." Another letter found in Druggan's room, dated Sept. 10 at Hollywood, Fla., and alluded to Capone's home in Palm Island, Fla. It read:

"Dear Friend Terry: 'I would like to know where I could get a list of all the firms which had done business with you on a matter of much importance. You will probably remember me as John Leeger, for whom you went to the front during the season of '27 at Miami.'

By CALVIN COOLIDGE

(Copyright, 1930.) NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 8. A FEW judges in different localities have recently come under suspicion. The first requisite of every unit of government is to furnish order and security. That means, in time of peace, protection from crimes against the person and property. The next requirement is the enforcement of legal obligations. To furnish a process for redress when these rights have been invaded, courts have been established. It is their duty to punish crime and decide causes between individuals. If the courts break down, the citizen has little remedy for public or private grievances.

Because of these indispensable public duties, it is necessary for the courts to be kept impartial, detached and pure. Any failure in this respect is a blow at the very vitals of our Government. The fundamentals of security and justice would both be gone. The result would be virtually unchecked crime and anarchy.

The general character of our bench is very high. It must be kept so. Any charges formally and seriously made of improper conduct by judges must be thoroughly investigated and all guilt actively prosecuted, that our courts be purged of every suspicion. A corrupt judge is one of the worst enemies of the republic.

CALVIN COOLIDGE. (One of a series of daily dispatches written for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and other newspapers by the former President of the United States.)

The Board of Aldermen yesterday passed ordinances prohibiting parking on Olive street from Channing and Vandeventer, Washington from Thersa.

ated, the contractors said, they signed. "Everything will work out all right," Jennings and Chapline are quoted as saying. "The increased cost will be passed on to the public. As for the money, don't think we get all of it, only 10 per cent."

Jennings explained that he would not keep his "commutation" but would turn it over to the Listing Bureau and use it for the benefit of the electrical fraternity.

Records of the Protective Association, examined by investigators, disclosed that approximately $145,000 has been contributed for insurance since the 1929 contracts went into effect. If Chapline and Jennings have been correctly quoted as to their commissions, they have profited about $12,500 each.

Compelled to Join Board. Included in the wage agreements were clauses obligating contractors to join the Electrical Approval Board and to complete their jobs of electrical installation subject to the judgment of the Board's inspectors. Jennings was vice president and Chapline president of this organization when founded, but later resigned.

Separate agreements were signed by the contractors with the Electrical Listing Bureau, by which the Bureau agreed to furnish estimates of labor and materials to contractors for all jobs on which they wanted to bid. Chapline is president and treasurer of the Listing Bureau, and receives a salary of $500 a month.

Testimony indicated that failure of the contractor to avail himself of the Listing Bureau's services in figuring his bid, resulted in disastrous reprisals.

Contractors were warned to follow the Bureau's estimates and to add a minimum profit of 33 1/3 per cent in formulating their bid. It was testified, under threat that "men would be called off the jobs" of those who disobeyed. Contractors were refused men for work on jobs when they computed their own costs with a lesser margin of profit.

Chapline, president of the Chapline Electric Co., 1509 Chestnut street, lives at 2 Schults road, Kirkwood. Jennings, besides his other offices, is president of the Union Labor Insurance Agency, Inc., Planters Building, and lives at 725 Monroe avenue, Kirkwood. He was an exhibitor at the Horse Show last month at the Arena.

Jennings is the local representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and because of his dominating influence during the last few years, has become known as the "Czar" of the electrical industry in St. Louis. He is also president of the Union Labor Insurance Agency, Inc., Planters Building, and lives at 725 Monroe avenue, Kirkwood.

Edward B. McLean Sued by Wife for $10,000 A MONTH

Continued From Page One. tigation that McLean had been made a secret agent of the Department of Justice and had the code of the Bureau of Investigation.

Last year McLean was in hot water again when his newspaper printed an editorial criticizing the Belgian Ambassador, Prince de Ligne. The Secretary of State wrote to the Ambassador, expressing regret for the "editorial discourtesy," and President Hoover invited the Prince to dinner. A Philadelphia newspaper published what purported to be an explanation of a social breach between McLean and the Belgian Ambassador.

McLean and McLean sued it for $1,000,000, and the Philadelphia paper then retracted its story.

Owned Famous Diamond. Mrs. McLean once owned the Hope diamond, the rare jewel with which superstition has associated so much misfortune because of the fate of some of its owners: Marie Antoinette, who was guillotined; Sultan Abdul Hamid, who lost his throne; Jean Baptiste Tavernier, who was torn to pieces by wild dogs. McLean was said to have paid $300,000 for the diamond. Mrs. McLean won it to the races at Laurel, Md., one day and won a nice bet on a horse named Prince of India.

But, people recalled the tragic history of the Hope Diamond when Vincent Walsh McLean, the first child of the pair, was killed in 1919 by an automobile. The parents disposed of the diamond afterward.

The boy, who was 9 years old at the time of his death, had been called "the hundred million dollar baby," and had been reared with extravagant care and luxury. He was surrounded by guards, governesses and tutors, and had been called to sleep in a golden cradle, the gift of King Leopold of the Belgians, who had been a friend of Mrs. McLean's father.

In addition to his prominence as a publisher and in political-social circles, McLean is known as a sportsman. For a number of years he has maintained a racing stable, and horses bearing his colors have accounted for some of the big stakes of the American turf.

Defense attorneys served notice today on State's Attorney Lindauer that they would demand particulars of the State's charges in the kidnaping case when five million gangsters are called for on Monday morning at Belleville.

The defense lawyers' contention is that they do not know the details of the State's indictment charges the defendants against Sam Scorfin, Carr street officer, in East St. Louis on July 1, and held him for ransom. The defense will contend it has a right to know the precise particulars before going to trial.

State's Attorney Lindauer with-held comment, but declared he would be ready for trial Monday and would resist any effort toward continuance.

HUSBAND KILLED BY MAN WHO MET HIS WIFE AT PARTY

Orville Goff, Chauffeur, Fatally Stabbed by Herman Weber in Row on Porch of Home.

ASSAILANT FLEES BUT IS ARRESTED

Victim Greeted Couple at Door on Their Arrival at 1 a. m.—Slayer Pleads Self Defense.

Orville Goff, 29-year-old chauffeur, was fatally stabbed early today on the front porch of his home at 4129 Manchester avenue in a quarrel with Herman Weber, 27, a highway laborer, who had escorted Goff's wife home from a party.

Weber fled on foot, abandoning his automobile, and was arrested at the home of a relative. He said he stabbed Goff in self-defense after Goff had been struck.

Goff, who died of a wound in the left breast at 3 a. m., two hours after the stabbing, told police he had sat at a window for two hours waiting for his wife to come home. At 1 o'clock he saw her walking west toward the house and observed an automobile driving slowly in the same direction. The machine proceeded to the next corner, turned around and came back to the house where Weber awaited and joined Mrs. Goff on the porch. Goff opened the door and asked, "Who's your friend?" His wife replied, "I don't know him." Whereupon Goff said, he struck Weber with his fist. Weber struck back and ran. Going inside, Goff reached for his pocket knife. Mrs. Goff, who is 28, and Weber gave similar accounts of the quarrel, relating that they met at a party at 1008 Tower Grove avenue where Weber had volunteered to drive Mrs. Goff to her home. Weber led police to a lot near the Goff home where his pocket knife, thrown away in flight, was found.

Mrs. Goff, mother of two small children by a former marriage, married Goff a year ago. Weber, employed on Highway No. 66 near Waverly, had come to St. Louis for the week-end.

According to an announcement, the exchange's opposition "is because to release him from a 10-year sentence having served only three and one-half years would have a tremendously bad influence on others of like criminal tendencies and would seriously undermine the enforcement of law at a time when the Government is hard pressed to retain its integrity."

SHIPMENTS AVOID TERMINAL MARKETS

Manager Says It Could Have Operated on Spot Cash Basis if Boycott Had Not Interfered.

Inquiry into the financial status of the National Order Buying Co., one of three firms said to have been boycotted by other East Side livestock dealers, continued today with F. T. Ketter, secretary and manager of the company, resuming the witness stand.

At one point W. M. Borders Sr., of defense counsel, interrupted the examination to assert that William S. Bedal, attorney for the Producers Livestock Commission Co., had been "indicating to the witness how to answer." A heated exchange between the two lawyers was interrupted by the examiner, who threatened to call a United States Marshal. Borders resumed the questioning after offering to present 20 witnesses to prove his assertion.

The hearing, instituted by the Department of Agriculture, which has cited 47 dealers to show why their licenses should not be revoked, is being held in the East St. Louis Federal Building before J. B. Horgan, of the legal staff of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde.

Ketter, who was examined yesterday by Borders Jr., testified that his company, a co-operative sponsored by the Farm Board, in 1929, did a business which totaled about $10,000,000, and made a profit of about $10,000.

Then it would appear that your profit on this volume of business represents the saving to farmers achieved by co-operative marketing instead of the old method?" Borders asked.

"And that saving for the farmer," Borders added, "represents about one-tenth of one per cent." Ketter replied that the conclusion was true in so far as the figures were, but added that he did not believe the possibilities of saving by co-operative marketing had been fully developed.

Bond to Guarantee Debts.

The National Order Buying Co., Ketter testified, has a paid-in capital of $40,000, the stock being held by seven co-operative commission associations affiliated with the National Live Stock Marketing Association, and a surplus of $30,000. It has posted an approved bond of $60,000 to guarantee its obligations, he said.

Borders, seeking to show that the firms cited were justified in refusing to deal with the National company because they were doubtful of its ability to meet trade practices on the National Stock Yards, brought out that the regulations of the St. Louis Live Stock Exchange, approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, specify that each transaction must be for cash and that payment must be made not later than 3 p. m. on the day of purchase.

"Our company is not a member of the Live Stock Exchange and does not consider itself bound by its rules," Ketter said. "But it was our intention to make payments on the date of purchase and this was done except for our transactions with the Producers' Live Stock Commission Association."

That association, also a member of the Farm Board's National Live Stock Marketing Association, is another of the firms said to have been boycotted.

Ketter said that the National company, within a few weeks after it opened on the St. Louis market last Aug. 4, had an outstanding account of $54,000 with the Producers, which was settled by a check for $24,000 and an unsecured demand note for $30,000 which has since been taken up.

Discussion of Cash Rule.

"Our business at St. Louis exceeded our expectations and temporarily we did not have enough capital here to proceed on a spot cash basis," Ketter said. Had it not been that his firm was boycotted, he said, it would have been able to conduct a cash business.

"Do I understand," Borders asked, "that you didn't have enough money to pay the Producers, but that if you had been able to buy from other companies, and assume heavier obligations, you would have had enough money?" Ketter replied that funds could have been transferred to the St. Louis office of the company from its headquarters at Columbus, O., but because his company was unable to buy from old line companies it chose to handle the situation the way it did.

He was asked about his opinion of the value of the spot cash rule which prevails at all of the larger markets and replied: "I think that payment should be made on a mutually agreeable basis. If the spot cash rule had prevailed at all markets stockmen would have sus-

New Head of Postal Detectives Cares Nothing for Mystery Fiction

T. M. Milligan Who Solved Two $1,000,000 Robberies Sees Nothing Romantic in His Task—It's Routine Work.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Thomas M. Milligan, who has solved thousands of minor mysteries besides playing the detective role in two $1,000,000 mail robberies, yesterday became chief inspector of the postal service. He has a background of 18 years in the inspection service. Two outstanding events in his career were the solving of the Rondout (Ill.) $2,500,000 mail robbery of 1924 and the $1,000,000 Toledo (O.) mail truck robbery of 1921.

Milligan succeeded the late William R. Spillman, who died Aug. 25. Since Spillman's death, he had been acting chief.

Milligan presented no poker face and made no mask of his horn-rimmed spectacles as he answered questions about mail robberies.

Detective stories have no lure for Milligan. He doesn't even read them, he says.

"The stage play stuff is all right for headlines, but it doesn't exist in actual practice," was his comment. "Hard work and patience, the following up of every clue, common sense—that's what solves most of the postal theft problems."

The Rondout robbery was one of the most spectacular in size and circumstance in postal office annals. Yet Milligan says there was nothing romantic about his part in it. It was the only case in which a postoffice inspector ever turned robber. William J. Fahy organized a band of desperadoes that held up

SHOT TO DEATH AS HE ENTERS CHICKEN HOUSE

Unidentified Man Killed Near East St. Louis by Pcar Weber, Farmer.

The body of a man shot to death as he entered a farmer's chicken house three miles south of East St. Louis, last night, is awaiting identification at an East Side undertaking establishment and the farmer, Oscar Weber, 26 years old, has been released pending an inquest.

Weber told Assistant State's Attorney Curt Lindauer that he shot the man from ambush after chickens had been stolen from him on several consecutive nights. Weber asserted he saw the intruder open the chicken house and called to him to halt.

The man, Weber said, raised his hands and walked toward him. "I was afraid he was going to attack me," the farmer said, "and I let him have both barrels of my shotgun. He walked a few steps more and fell."

Approximately 20 buckshot had penetrated the man's body.

The dead man was six feet tall, weighed 170 or 180 pounds, had brown hair, a dark complexion and gold bridge work, and was wearing a navy pea-coat, blue shirt, gray slouch hat, dark trousers and tan shoes.

In his pockets were found a half-pint bottle of whisky, a pack of cards, a checkbook, a pocket watch, a key chain and a small tin of powder. He was carrying a gunnybag when killed.

Weber's farm is on the Old St. Louis road, in Centerville Township, near Lake Station.

HENRY WOODS SAFE DEPOSIT MANAGER, DIES OF INJURY

Henry Woods, 42 years old, manager of the safe deposit department of the Plaza National Bank, died at City Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull suffered Tuesday evening, when he was struck by a street car in Olive street, near Twelfth boulevard.

Woods was on his way home when hit by an eastbound Olive car operated by Motorman G. W. Bacon, who gave bond pending an inquest, said Woods stepped in the path of the car.

Woods, who lived at 5156 Waterman avenue, was the father of Ray Woods, noted high diver. He is survived by his two other sons and a daughter, and his widow, Mrs. Beale M. Woods. Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Monday from the Craig Undertaking Co., 4463 Washington boulevard, to Immanuel Baptist Church.

PATTERSON WANTS ELECTION FRAUD STATUTES REVISED

Missouri Senator Says Present Law Doesn't Cover Individual Violations.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 8.—Senator Roscoe C. Patterson announced here last night he would move in the next session of Congress to revise election fraud statutes which were repealed by Congress nearly a decade ago. The Senator is a member of the committee investigating campaign funds.

At present, Patterson pointed out, the Federal Government can act only when there is a conspiracy in fraudulent election activities. An individual violator virtually is safe from prosecution.

"The conspiracy statutes lack teeth to get at the fraud in most elections," Patterson remarked. "The old statutes covering these frauds were repealed by Congress that feared the Federal Government was interfering in state elections. The law should apply only to elections of Federal officers."

CUCKOO GANGSTER SHOT FROM AUTO WITH MACHINE GUN

Jimmy Cox Attacked After Viewing Body of James Darmond, Slain by County Sheriff Lill.

SAYS FRIEND TOOK HIM TO HOSPITAL

Arrested 248 Times in Six Years—Police Get Reports of Internal Strife in Gunmen's Band.

Jimmy Cox, Cuckoo gangster and former convict, was wounded with machine gun bullets last midnight a few minutes after leaving an undertaking establishment at 3125 Lafayette avenue, where he viewed the body of James J. Darmond, slain Cuckoo gangster.

Cox, who lost an arm in a gang shooting in 1924, was taken to St. Mary's Infirmary, 1526 Papin street, in an automobile by an unidentified man at 12:15 a. m. He was advised to obtain emergency treatment elsewhere, due to lack of facilities at the infirmary, and a short time later was let out of the car near the receiving room at City Hospital.

Examination disclosed Cox had been shot twice, in the left leg and thigh, with 45-caliber bullets. Amputation of this caliber is used in sub-machine guns. In a statement to Southland District police, Cox said he was "fired on" by three men in an automobile as he was driving east in Henrietta avenue.

Tried to Get Away.

"I left the undertaker's about midnight, walked through a lot to the 3100 block of Henrietta, where I had parked my car, and started to drive east," Cox related. "I had just started when a large car with three fellows in it came up the street, and one of them started firing with a machine gun. I speeded up and got away as fast as I could, and found a friend, who took me to the hospital."

Cox declined to name the man who took him to the hospital. From a description furnished by Louis and Charles R. Spelman, 2523A Cora avenue, three years, and Miss Marcella Schneider, who lives in the 4200 block of Maffitt avenue, one year.

CORRECTION ON JUDGE FARIS' RULING IN KERENS SUIT PLEA

He Did Not Say Sisters Acted "Arbitrarily" as Had Been Stated.

Overruling a motion for the allowance of attorneys' fees for Mrs. Madeline Kenna and Mrs. Gladys Colket in their fight to keep their brother, Vincent Kerens, from getting his $1,900,000 share of his father's estate, Judge Faris yesterday held that the suit was tried "upon the issue raised by these defendants, that the trustee (the St. Louis Union Trust Co.) in finding Vincent had voluntarily complied with the will's injunctions of secrecy and seclusion for a consecutive period of five years had acted arbitrarily and in a way which was at least constructively if not actually fraudulent."

In yesterday's Post-Dispatch, the Judge was quoted erroneously as saying the sisters "acted arbitrarily and in a way which was at least constructively if not actually fraudulent." He held that they "fought for their own hands" and that they "made necessary this suit by their own defiant recalcitrance."

'FAMILY NOTES' FOR $200,000 IN CLOSED BANK

Relatives of President and Cashier of Depositary at Ava, Mo., to Be Sued on the Bonds of Officers.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 8.—A shortage of approximately $18,000 in the surplus account of the closed Bank of Ava has been disclosed with the filing of the State Bank Examiners' inventory of the institution in the County Recorder's office at Ava.

The inventory showed a surplus of only about $14,000 at the time of the failure, while the public statement of the bank's condition prior to the closing placed the surplus at $50,000. How the shortage occurred between the time of the published statement and the failure is not disclosed by the inventory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AVA, Mo., Nov. 8.—At least $200,000 of the $450,000 in notes held by the Bank of Ava when it closed two weeks ago were "family notes" signed by officers of the depositary or members of their families. It was disclosed when the State Finance Department turned the business over to J. E. Cahill, regional supervisor of State bank liquidation in Southwest Missouri.

Arthur M. Curtis, chairman of the Republican State Committee, who recently was named Assistant Attorney-General, in charge of defunct bank litigation, here checking over affairs with Supervisor Cahill, announced that suits would be filed to collect on the president's and cashier's bonds.

Members of the Adams and Reynolds families, which had operated the bank since its acquisition in 1890, signed the notes. It was disclosed. While Mrs. Sally Adams, president at the time the bank closed and widow of one of the founders, was not so heavily indebted personally, her two daughters and a son-in-law were shown as the signers of notes totaling several thousands of dollars.

Likewise, J. A. G. Reynolds, the cashier, who committed suicide at his home Wednesday, supposedly as the result of worry over the bank's closing, was not greatly in debt, but there were several notes signed by his brother, W. F. Reynolds, totaling more than $20,000, and others signed by two sons and a widow.

The notes were unsecured but in most instances the liquidating officer will be able to realize their full amount, it is thought. One instance mentioned was that of W. F. Reynolds, whose large property holdings will make his obligations good.

Another sum of $7000 or $8000 is comprised of what is known as "cash items," representing money orders of the bank withdrawn for personal use and indicated by gas bills or "I. O. U's" in the bank's records.

An inventory of the bank's assets was filed in the Douglas County Recorder's office yesterday by Attorney Curtis.

In connection with the large amount of money represented by the "family notes," it was pointed out that no state bank in Missouri can lend an amount equal to more than a fourth the capital and surplus to any one borrower.

Men frequently evade this provision, however, according to Curtis, by having wife or child or even a friend sign the note for them. The Bank of Ava was capitalized for $250,000, with a surplus of $50,000, which would have made the limit to be lent to any one person $21,500.

An Ex-Republican's Pen of Victory.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It was the immortal Gen. Wolfe, British commander in the famous battle of the Heights of Abraham (near Quebec), who, as he lay mortally wounded on the battlefield, was told by his officers that the victory had been won, and said, "I die happy." As one of the many thousands of Lincoln Republicans who stand for men and humanity, I am intensely elated with the general election results that took place on Tuesday.

The G. O. P. has not been right for many years, and until its leaders reform, from now on they will gradually be retired to private life. Their entire strength has been due to their elaborate campaign funds, and without this asset they would have been crushed years ago. Their conception of the proper treatment of the people's interests has been astounding, and confined exclusively to the classes instead of the masses. The Democrats (of whom temporarily, at least, I am one) should demonstrate that they really have executive ability of the uplifting type, and by such department they will be rewarded by being made custodians of this great country indefinitely. The greatest citizen is the person that knows when to scratch his ticket. Locally, we have a very rare pleasure. The Post-Dispatch is always a champion of the people's interests, and in our hour of this great victory, it behooves me to say that your publication is an exponent of right against might all the time.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WANT to thank your paper for your editorial of Oct. 15 with reference to my candidacy for Circuit Judge in St. Louis County on the Democratic ticket, not so much because of its reference to me, as because of the independent attitude of your paper in elections and its disinterested purpose in trying to serve the voters of the community.

An Echo of 1920.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

TUESDAY'S election brought a landslide to Democracy. When we think about the returns we see some strange happenings. In Kansas City in the Fifth Congressional District, Joseph B. Shannon won by 10,000, while in the Fourth Congressional District of Missouri Judge R. E. Culver lost by 10,000 to his Republican opponent, David Hopkins.

Many of us remember in 1920 that the democratic State Convention refused to allow James L. Reid, then a United States Senator from Missouri, to be a delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention held shortly thereafter at San Francisco. The Fifth District had already selected its delegates. Joseph B. Shannon was one of the rare Shannon won by 10,000, while in the Fourth Congressional District of Missouri Judge R. E. Culver lost by 10,000 to his Republican opponent, David Hopkins.

Enjoyed St. Louis Trip.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THROUGH your contribution and that of other business organizations in St. Louis, 350 students of vocational agriculture in Illinois enjoyed a wonderful trip to St. Louis and the National Dairy Show. The various trips and entertainment provided by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce for the vocational agriculture students at the National Dairy Show have made this trip one which the boys look forward to each year. A trip to the National Dairy Show in itself would be of interest to these vocational agriculture students, but the organized program which the Chamber of Commerce prepares for this group of boys makes the trip a real educational one. ## THE GRAVOIS WIDENING.

We believe there is a good deal of misunderstanding and misapprehension about the widening of Gravois avenue. No doubt some of the discussion has been inspired by the desire to make political capital out of the situation, although, of course, there is room for honest differences of opinion as to how a great public improvement of this nature should be financed.

The procedure followed by the city in this case did not differ in any essential particular from that in other street widenings, such as Olive street, Washington avenue and Hampton avenue. The ordinance authorizing the improvement was passed as long ago as April 28, 1923. The commissioners, O. Dietz, G. Kollas and G. Johnson, were appointed June 7, 1928. They held 484 meetings during the course of 29 months at which taxpayers had the privilege of appearing to argue their case. The commission's report was completed on July 5, 1929. Final judgment was handed down last month and, according to the arrangement between the city and Stifel, Nicolaus & Co., the amount of the damages was paid into court. It then became necessary for the city to bill taxpayers in the benefited district. All this was done in strict accordance with the city charter and with the law.

We agree with Bernard Dickmann and other critics of the city in their point that inadequate publicity was given to the boundaries of the benefit district. Many taxpayers were astonished to discover for the first time that they were in the benefit district when they received their bills. Some new plan of giving widespread publication to the areas of benefited districts should be devised. However, assuming that the future will prove that the benefit district is in fact benefited by the improvement, Mr. Dickmann's criticism does not go to the heart of the matter.

It is true that the tax bills came at a time when many citizens are hard pressed for money because of the coming winter, etc. But it is also true that they may take their time in paying the bills. They do not have to be paid for 10 years. Therefore the sending out of the bills at this time will not necessarily cause a financial emergency in any family. Some of the Gravois critics have been telling the people that the tax bills are liens on property, and that there is danger of foreclosure unless they are paid. This is true in a technical sense, but with 10 years to pay there is actually little danger that it will ever amount to anything in practice.

There is a sunnier side to the picture. The widening of Gravois avenue for two miles at a cost of approximately $2,000,000 will likely begin in the spring. It will be necessary to tear down and to construct some 200 buildings. This work will undoubtedly give employment to men who would otherwise be out of work. Moreover, owners of buildings will receive the advantage of the low construction costs current in the present depression. In addition, the city will reap the fruits of an improvement sorely needed for many years, which South Side business men have repeatedly pleaded with the city to build. It will form an artery in the great South Side district into the projected widened and double-decked Third street and hence into lower downtown. But we hardly need labor the point that widened Gravois avenue will be of enormous benefit in convenience and time saving.

It is contended that an improvement of this nature should be paid for not by the immediate neighborhood through which it runs, but by the whole city. There is a good deal of cogency to this argument, inasmuch as it cannot be denied that the widening of Gravois will be of value to the whole city. On the other hand, it can be demonstrated with mathematical precision that an improvement like this does actually increase surrounding property values. It has always been true, in St. Louis as well as in other cities, and we are confident that it will also be true of the Gravois avenue benefited district. It is a bit too early to prove this assertion in the case of Gravois avenue both because the widening has not yet even begun and because the real estate market suffers the same slump as affects other industries. But we feel sure that in the course of time the property owners in the Gravois district will receive profits from this improvement far in excess of the benefit judgments that have been levied against them.

Other cities which have financed such improvements from city-wide taxes are finding that the St. Louis system is best. In Milwaukee, for example, it has been found that politicians use money for public improvements in their own districts without any regard for the city as a whole, and in utter contempt of any intelligent effort at city planning. Political corruption and favoritism in Milwaukee have exhausted that city's improvement funds, and it is now seeking a way out by adopting the methods employed in St. Louis. Cincinnati, where the city pays for 50 per cent of all public improvements, finds its system unworkable and is also looking to St. Louis for guidance.

No system involving so many individuals and difficult problems can be perfect. However, it is interesting in this connection that the nine charter amendments relating to condemnation procedure were defeated at the polls Tuesday. The success of these amendments would have cleared away many of the vexations and delays complained of in the Gravois widening case, yet the voters were too indifferent to put them into effect. To come in at the eleventh hour as some of the Gravois residents have done is not the way to tackle public problems. The Gravois case is closed and the courts having passed upon it there is nothing more to be done. Many other widenings remain to be completed, however, and it behooves the people to see that the defeated amendments are incorporated in the charter at the earliest possible opportunity.

COLORED ICE DANGERS.

What color will you have your ice? Cerise, lavender, yellow, green—take your choice. Or if some other tint is more pleasing, name it. A speaker at the convention of the Eastern Ice Association forecast the coming of colored ice, and if it is to arrive in bulk why not in cubes? We suggest the possibility with misgivings, for the advent of colored individual cubes cannot be without its train of troubles. There is nothing more intricate at bridge luncheons and dinners now than color schemes, and bringing ice into the picture will only make things worse. Heretofore cracked ice has been cracked ice and did as well on a plate of raw oysters as it did as a bed for olives. When colors come in, the same hue will not even suffice for all olives. Vermilion may do for stuffed, but it would about swearwords at ripe. What if the maid in a last minute rush put asure cubes in the lemonade, or pink in the ice tea? Then, too, while the ice setup may harmonize with the floral decorations, how is the hostess to know it won't clash with the honor guest's tangerine tunic, scheduled for its inaugural wearing? We dare not speculate further.

WHILE ST. LOUIS LANGUISES.

While St. Louis last Tuesday was voting down the whole sheaf of progressive measures designed for the improvement of the city and State, other cities were forging ahead.

Despite hard times, Chicagoans were asked to pass on 13 bond issues totaling $23,520,000. These bond issues were for new bridges, new boulevard links, more traffic signals, street lights, playgrounds and other purposes. They were approved by larger majorities than any bond issues have received in Chicago in the last five years. In addition, Chicago voted overwhelmingly for a State bond issue of $14,000,000 to provide State game, fish and forest reserves. In Baltimore a $16,000,000 bond issue for paving and other improvements was passed. San Francisco authorized $850,000 for public works.

Other cities have learned the lesson that public improvements pay handsome dividends and even a time of depression does not alter this conviction. The open-handedness of Chicago voters is proverbial, despite a cynical attitude toward the city officials, and explains why Chicago has made such mighty strides during the past 20 years. Until St. Louis arouses itself from its conservatism and the domination of a narrow and reactionary political machine it will continue to falter in its rivalry with the other great cities of the United States.

What makes the results of the election in St. Louis particularly disappointing is that none of the measures proposed on the ballot provided for money expenditure at all; some of them were even designed to lighten the tax burden. For example, Proposition No. 8, providing for marginal condemnation, would have provided $20,000,000 for the improvement of the central river front. It is imperative for the city's development that this improvement be made, yet the voters declined to approve a measure which would have paid a large portion of its cost and brought years forward its realization. The nine charter amendments should have been passed by an overwhelming vote. They provided for a simplification of condemnation procedure which would have speeded up all of the unfinished projects outlined in the 1923 bond issue. They were drawn by City Counselor Muench, had the approval of all civic leaders, and at no time during the campaign was there any expressed opposition to them. They, too, would have saved the voters money, but the mighty steam roller of the Republican machine flattened them.

The results of the election emphasize that St. Louis is in the grip of a selfish, unenlightened political oligarchy, interested only in perpetuating itself in power. It knows only yellow dog politics, and its contempt for the public interest has become a scandal. St. Louis is going backward under this kind of leadership.

POST-ELECTION NEWS REEL.

Vice President Curtis says result of elections will spur Republicans, and Senator Moses mourns that administration now faces "an amplitude of difficulties." "Brother Charley" Bryan is elected Governor of Nebraska, and William J. Bryan's nephew, Silas M., is defeated for Congress in Minnesota; H. M. McGehee, disabled lawyer, is elected Prosecuting Attorney at Van Buren, Ark., and J. R. Brinkley, ousted physician, loses race for Governor of Kansas; Brookline, Mass. (population, 47,000) votes to permit motion pictures, and Arkansas adopts provision for daily Bible reading in schools; St. Louis voters reject nine charter amendments to facilitate public improvements, and New Jersey adopts $100,000,000 public works program; Dr. Robert P. Carroll, Syracuse University professor, is defeated as dry candidate for Governor of New York, and Dean Wilbur L. Cross, vet., is elected Governor of Connecticut; President Hoover stays up past usual bedtime to get election returns, and doctors forbid Mayor Thompson of Chicago to receive any returns at all; outcome is a "crazy quilt," without significance, says Chairman Fess of G. O. P. National Committee, and John J. Raabok, Democratic chairman, calls it a "notable victory on clean-cut political issues."

Wonder if Mrs. McCormick still thinks "you cannot buy a landslide?"

ARMING BUSINESS WITH FACTS.

Overproduction has been catalogued as a major cause of the present unemployment and the economic depression. An attack on this problem, then, would be an important step toward solving the country's difficulties. And for this attack the Federal census of distribution will furnish a potent weapon. Taken as part of the decennial census last spring, the survey will tell the manufacturer or distributor what he needs to know about consumption, about distribution, about the extent to which a given field of business is occupied. Retail and wholesale firms have been able to make little use of commercial information gathered by the Census Bureau in previous years, as it dealt with manufacturing, agriculture, mining and timber, not with the problems of selling goods. Now, however, they will have a complete survey of their respective fields. Persons desiring to enter business and those contemplating expansion will be able to appraise their chances for success by study of the distribution census returns.

The Industrial Club of St. Louis, realizing the importance of the voluminous figures soon to be published, has issued a book, "An Outline of Market Surveys," and explaining how the information may be used by manufacturers, distributors and communities. The book includes a comprehensive outline of what the census will show, listing the hundreds of mercantile classifications to which it applies. In addition, attention is directed to where other information important to the intelligent sales executive and merchant may be found in governmental and other compilations of facts and figures.

In the business of supplying the public's needs, it is an economic necessity that there be as little overlapping of functions as possible. Over-expansion in certain fields might have been prevented had such figures as the forthcoming survey been obtainable. The Industrial Club performs an important duty to business men in supplying the key to how this much-needed information may be obtained.

The election results should put Mr. Hoover in just the proper frame of mind to make his scheduled address at the pickle manufacturers' banquet tonight.

THEIR LAST HOPE.

Nation's Press Interprets Election as Popular Revolt

THE PEOPLE TAKE CONTROL.

From the Portland (Me.) Evening News.
THE heartening and hopeful aspect of the whole election was that it revealed the intellectual independence of the electorate. The old political buncombe did not work. Newspaper partisanship did not fool them. Not in many years has an election given such striking evidence of the determination of the people to run their own affairs and to take back control of their Government from the hands of the machine politicians who so long have fooled and betrayed them.

TARIFF REACTION.

From the Wall Street Journal.
TARIFF legislation always brings its reaction at the polls, and the Hawley-Smoot act of 1930 was peculiarly unfortunate in its untimeliness.

NO ALIBI.

From the New York Evening World.
THE administration's failures, its betrayals of its pledges of 1928, and the perfidy of some of its legislative policies have combined to deal it one of the most humiliating blows ever inflicted on an administration. For this there can be no alibi. The national issue was the Hoover administration, and members of the Cabinet appealed to the people to "stand by the President." The voters heard the appeal, they measured its meaning, and they turned their backs.

"A HEALTHY THING."

From the New York Evening Post.
WE do not believe that the Democratic landslide must necessarily be a bad thing for business. In fact, it seems to us that a change may be, as an important New York banker said, "a healthy thing."

"FULL DINNER PAIL" UPSET.

From the Toledo Capital.
IT is the inevitable which happens, when a party which has claimed to be the wizard of prosperity finds itself in the grip of one of the worst business depressions in a quarter century. The voters took advantage of the opportunity to "sock" it. It has been consistent Republican doctrine for two generations that Democratic administrations bring hard times and that Republican administrations are synonymous with the full dinner pail. Sooner or later this out-of-date view of economic forces was due for a sad run-in with the electorate.

HOOVER PAVED THE WAY.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.
MR. HOOVER had put himself in the way of being charged with responsibility for "hard times" by his insistence as a candidate that the only way to prevent hard times and insure a continuance of prosperity was to elect him, instead of a Democrat, President.

BLOW TO PUSSYFOOTING.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.
THERE are lessons in all this for party leaders—lessons which the American people serve notice must be taken to heart. It should be a long time before Republican spokesmen again claim that prosperity can be guaranteed by a cross under the eagle. More important is the lesson in relation to the eighteenth amendment. Voters are weary of pussyfooters. Victory went to men not afraid to speak out loud. Only where the Republicans broke away from the advice of their own national chairman and the example of the President were they able to resist the undertow of discontent on Tuesday. Here is an unmistakable hint for Mr. Hoover. He has lost the ball. Unless he recovers it he will lose the game.

A NATIONAL REBUKE.

From the Milwaukee Journal.
THE Republican administration is rebuked all over the country. It has had 10 years, almost undisturbed, harvesting of the shekels for the Mellons and Grundys. It has lived through all scandals and Veterans Bureau steals; through Newberry and Frank L. Smith and Vard. And now, when it had reached out for only a little more pie, it gets the ax where it fell 20 years ago. Mr. Hoover, as Mr. Taft did, feels the heaviest weight of the blow.

HEAVY BLOW TO MR. HOOVER.

From the New York Times.
INEVITABLY the heavy blows dealt Republicans by the voters will everywhere be taken as a repudiation of President Hoover's leadership of his party. General reactions caused by the eighteenth amendment were undoubtedly one of the major causes of Republican wreckage.

CAUSE FOR SERIOUS REFLECTION.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.
THE Democratic success throughout the nation is notable, as notable in its way as the unparalleled Hoover vote two years ago. There should be much in this revelation of quick shifting by voting millions from one party to the other to cause political leaders to indulge in a little serious reflection. The value of party labels has never been more sensationally deflated than by this impressive demonstration of the variability of the electorate. It means that to gain and hold public confidence a party must by its acts merit that confidence.

WARNING MR. HOOVER.

From the Denver Rocky Mountain News.
THE Republicans in general and Mr. Hoover in particular will have to reverse policies and produce much better results or go the way of the Taft administration.

1928 AND 1930.

From the Chicago Daily Tribune.
THE results of the election, were predetermined by the character and consequences of the election two years ago. Mr. Hoover was not responsible for the disillusionment of American business men as to the new era and its permanence, but when the illusion cracked he had nothing in his medicine chest for it. Another man might not have had the handicap of a reputation for miracles. When economic grief came down upon the administration it was carrying the banner of Bryan and following his lead into pacifism, prohibition, internationalism and economic folly.

REVOLT AGAINST STUPIDITY.

From the New York Telegram.
WE were revolting against? We were revolting against several things: against hard times, but against stupidity also, against pussyfooting and stubbornness, the stupidity of "statesmen" who "cure" hard times with a tariff that cuts 30 per cent from our exports.

PROMISES WON'T DO.

From the Springfield (Mo.) Daily News.
WITH two years to go, the administration may be able to regain its lost popularity, but it will certainly have to do it by performance. Promises alone won't do it. If Mr. Hoover regains his former popularity, he will prove himself the superman he was reputed to be. Senator-elect Morrow has the simplest explanation for the overturn: "The American people in 1928 looked for a new heaven and a new earth. They didn't find it. So they looked again."

SEEKING LEADERSHIP.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.
PARTLY a reflection of the dissatisfaction of voters with the economic condition of the country, the results are also an emphatic protest against the G. O. P. leadership of recent years. The primary significance of the election will lie in the personalities it has projected into the foreground. The American people appear to have demanded a new leadership and a restatement of policy on broad lines.

KOTOWING A FAILURE.

From the Kansas City Star.
THE voters showed their opinion of a government whose kotowing for prosperity had failed to produce results.

LESSON TO THE FAITHFULS.

From the Atlanta Constitution.
THE double lesson the people have thus written for the politicians of both parties is that there is peril to any party that grossly violates its promise to the people and accents that faithlessness by doing so. There should be much in this revelation of quick shifting by voting millions from one party to the other to cause political leaders to indulge in a little serious reflection. The value of party labels has never been more sensationally deflated than by this impressive demonstration of the variability of the electorate. It means that to gain and hold public confidence a party must by its acts merit that confidence.

MASSACHUSETTS, THERE SHE STANDS!

From the Springfield (Mass.) Daily Republican.
TWO Democratic Senators from Massachusetts! It has come to pass, and for 100 years or more no one had dreamed it could.

A PARTY DISCIPLINED.

From the Boston Evening Transcript.
THE Republican party has been disciplined by its own members in Massachusetts. The tariff bill was a mistake, as President Hoover himself must have believed. The Republican party, though by no means solely responsible, now pays for the error because it happened to be the party in power.

A REFERENDUM ON PROHIBITION.

From the New York Herald Tribune.
DEPRESSION contributed a background against which Republicans everywhere fought an uphill struggle. Even more potent in most sections was the mounting sentiment which has plainly developed into an overwhelming demand for straight repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

WHAT HOOVER LACKED.

From the Emporia Gazette.
PRINCIPALLY the Republican party lost because the people misunderstood Herbert Hoover. He lacked capacity to dramatize himself as the exponent of any cause. He was unable to control Congress as an executive leader should, and must lead and control in a democracy.

GOOD WORK.

From the Cleveland Press.
B I and large the election was a very good day's work. Baileys' election to the Senate definitely terminates Anti-Saloon League domination of Ohio politics and serves as a salutary rebuke to Senator McCulloch and the Republican leadership in Congress for the suicidal tariff policy they pursued.

HINDENBURG: THE MAN AND THE LEGEND. By Margaret Goldsmith and Frederick Voigt. (Morrow, $2.50).

HIS service in piloting the German Republic through innumerable crises, domestic and foreign, since he assumed the presidency in 1925, will doubtless be recorded in history as the outstanding achievement in Paul von Hindenburg's lifetime. Yet the present volume, announced as a biography of President von Hindenburg, devotes only its last three pages to a sketch, and a hasty one, of Hindenburg as President. More space than this is given to his Junker ancestry, to his given to his Junker ancestry, to his days in cadet school, to his military career, to his dealings with the Kaiser, to every other phase of his public life.

If this treatment is to be accepted as an appraisal of Hindenburg's career, then his term as President is an anti-climax to his distinguished military record, his motives in accepting the office are more important than his accomplishments therein, and the battle of Tannenberg meant more to the German people than the preservation of the Republic. But this distorted view is not borne out by the contemporary accounts of Hindenburg's wise leadership in these trying times for democracy in the Reich. Ample material was available to tell a significant story of how Hindenburg guided his country through threatening perils, but the authors of this book choose to disregard it.

This adverse judgment having been rendered, more favorable comment is appropriate for the remainder of the book. The life and character of Hindenburg, up to 1918, are thoroughly treated, from his cadet days, beginning at 11, to his leaving retirement, at 78, to become President. Hindenburg was a product of the German military machine, with its emphasis on duty to Kaiser and Fatherland, and he was efficient, even brilliant, as a soldier, and his military successes in the war years built up the Hindenburg legend which made him an idol of the people. Duty was ever his god, but when he had to choose between Kaiser and Fatherland, at the parting of their ways in November, 1918, he accepted the welfare of the German people as the more important.

It was here that his path led away from that of Ludendorff, with whom he had shared military glory and finally crushing defeat. Ludendorff today is discredited, lending a once great name to fantastic schemes, denouncing imaginary enemies and lamenting the days that are gone. Hindenburg, once solemnly listed as one of the "war criminals" who were to be tried before Allied tribunals, now is honored by the world for the straightforward way in which he

TWO CARDINALS DIE IN DAY; 11 VACANCIES

Demise of Florence Archbishop Follows That of French Prelate.

By the Associated Press.
FLORENCE, Italy, Nov. 8.—Florence today mourned the death of Cardinal Mistrangelo, who passed away late last night at the age of 78, after an operation made necessary by a long illness.

Cardinal Mistrangelo was assigned by his physician to immediate removal to his death, which, with the death of Cardinal Charost at Rennes, France, yesterday, leaves the sacred college with but 29 Italian Cardinals and 30 foreign.

In view of the 11 vacancies which now exist, and the usual numerical predominance of Italians in its composition, it is now considered probable that several new Cardinals will be named in December.

At that time, in addition to such Italians as may be chosen, names of prominent Spanish-American churchmen and Archbishop Hanna of San Francisco are almost certain to receive consideration.

Entered Monastic Order at 18; Became Famous as Teacher. Cardinal Mistrangelo when 18 became a monk of the order of Calanzano Brothers, who dedicate their lives to teaching. He distinguished himself as a teacher and for his handling of refractory students. The order is restricted in numbers and has an iron discipline, and it is extremely rare for one of its members to rise in the hierarchy.

While still young, the monk was promoted to the rectorship of the college at Ovada. His reputation for being able to get work out of unwilling pupils soon became such that the clergy of the countryside sent him to the college boys they could lay hands on.

Famous as Preacher. At the same time he established a reputation as a preacher. He delivered a notable series of sermons at the College of Fiumicino when he was still in minor orders. Upon being raised to the priesthood, he evinced gifts as an organizer, particularly of religious ceremonies.

His first real test as a militant evangelist came when the population of a certain town rebelled against the Bishop, and threatened to go over to Protestantism. Mr. Mistrangelo arrived in the dissenting locality one morning, gathered the malcontents in the cathedral, and by his oratory prevailed upon them to return to their old faith. In 1893 Mr. Mistrangelo was made Bishop of Pontremoli, re-

HINDENBURG: THE MAN AND THE LEGEND. By Margaret Goldsmith and Frederick Voigt. (Morrow, $3.50).

As the legend was available to tell a significant story of how Hindenburg has guided his country through threatening perils, but the authors of this book chose to disregard it.

This adverse judgment having been rendered, more favorable comment is appropriate for the remainder of the book. The legend of the "Prinz der Roman" in 1929 and the French are said to be buying the book at the rate of 5000 a week. Still, the fact that it looks at this distance as though the author would have done better to tell us what he knows about beasts called wild instead of adopting the fairy tale device of having them tell it themselves. Something to the same effect might be said about the illustrations. This history of Hindenburg is predominantly a military history of Germany, from the Austro-Prussian War of 1866 to the armistice. The treatment of Hindenburg's campaigns on the east and west fronts in the World War is comprehensive, as is that of his part in the peace overtures and the demobilization of Germany. The book would leave little to desire.

BEASTS CALLED WILD. By Andre Demaison. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York, $3.50.)

The beasts called wild are not wild if properly understood and given to understand that they have nothing to fear from man, according to Andre Demaison, who has associated with them from his youth up, taken them into his home, on cub, antelope, monkey, deer, chimpanzee, python, heron, chimpanzee, young panther. He feels that he has come to understand them and knows that he has banished the fear of man that makes beasts wild. He has enjoyed their confidence, he says, and has shared their "thoughts" and has talked things over with them, as friends talk things over.

In preparing his brief for them he has chosen to let them speak for themselves, loaning them the language that they lack so that they can make themselves understood to those who do not understand their own speech.

Talking animals have their drawbacks. One cannot be sure that they mean exactly what they say, unaccustomed as they are to speaking in the language of man. There is always the chance that the author, helping them to make a mistake, translations being difficult. In this case there is the double difficulty of a double translation. Mons. Demaison having translated everything from Antelope, Marabout, etc., into French and Guy Endore having translated the French into English. The French version looked so good to the French Academy that "Beasts Called Wild" was awarded the "Prix du Roman" in 1929 and the French are said to be buying the book at the rate of 5000 a week. ## ZIMBALIST SOLOIST WITH SYMPHONY

Ochestra's Playing of Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" Is Outstanding.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE St. Louis Symphony Society presented Efraim Zimbalist as its soloist at the second Friday afternoon concert of the season yesterday. Mr. Zimbalist played the Beethoven Violin concerto to the apparent delight of a large audience and then, after the usual amount of persuading, delivered an excerpt from Max Regner's A Major Sonata.

This artist is generally reputed to be one of the first violin virtuosos of this generation and there was certainly nothing in his performance of Beethoven to make one take an appeal from that verdict. But though this performance was obviously the product of an unaffected and unpretentious hand, he called one to mind the whole poetic significance of the work. The first movement was over-deliberate and the third did not begin to live up to the frolicsome implications of the music. In the slow movement, however, Mr. Zimbalist achieved a simple, affecting eloquence and made that particular section the one memorable part of his whole performance.

Besides the Beethoven concerto the program included two other incontestable masterpieces of the nineteenth century, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" by Richard Strauss and the Brahms "Variations on a Theme by Haydn." The fourth number was "The Birds," a charming pastiche derived from the original melodies of three sixteenth-century composers and put into an appropriate setting by Ottorino Respighi, the contemporary Italian composer.

This work was being played in St. Louis for the first time and was given a sympathetic treatment by Mr. Arbos and his men. Besides furnishing a pleasant interlude between the series of Brahmsian monochromes and the lustrous chronicles of Till Eulenspiegel, this work proved to be a pointed reminder of the fact that descriptive program music did not originate with the romantic school. Rameau's description of a cuckoo hen was just as precise as Strauss' imitation of bleating sheep in "Don Quixote," and was much more ingratiating as music.

The high point of the program was Mr. Arbos' treatment of the Strauss tone-poem "Till Eulenspiegel" and the spirited response accorded him by the orchestra. This interpretation was a master demonstration in the graded use of dynamics. The successive climaxes were so managed that each one overtopped the preceding until at last, when Till was being caught up in his ultimate and maddest prank, the whole force of the orchestra was let loose. This reviewer has only one exception to make to a performance that on the whole was a marvel of precision both on the part of the conductor and the men. It seemed to me that Mr. Arbos tended to rush poor Till to the gallows a little faster than the occasion warranted in those final solemn bars for bassoons and brasses.

The program will be repeated this evening as usual.

Statement of Democratic Leaders On Party Policy in Next Congress

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. FOLLOWING is the statement of Democratic leaders pledging the party to a constructive program in the next Congress and to co-operate in avoiding a deadlock:

A remarkable victory has come to the Democratic party. We, however, regard it less as a political triumph than as a great opportunity for constructive service.

For a year and a half the Democrats have conducted a vigorous and honest campaign, could, not to destroy the administration, not to accomplish the downfall of any political figure, but to resist and to correct a situation that had become well nigh intolerable. The minority in the Senate and the House of Representatives fought bravely and sincerely to prevent the enactment of a tariff bill which was not only the apotheosis of bad economy, but was doubly dangerous because it would have placed the country in the throes of a ghastly business depression. It was no time to place a greater burden upon consumers and an additional handicap on business.

Despite the fact that the Democrats and the progressive wing of the Republican party, and over the protests of leading economists of the nation, that bill was forced on the country by the brutal strength of numbers, and was signed by the President. Some of the effects of its unwise, unjust and uneconomic provisions are already apparent. It is delaying the recovery of many industries through its destruction of our foreign markets, not only because of the hostility it has engendered, but as well by the retaliatory tariffs it has incited.

Responsibilities Grave. Of course, the leaders of Democracy are thrilled by the demonstration of confidence the country has given to the party and the other who must now assume legislative responsibility do not regard the present occasion as one for celebration or for self-gratification. The responsibilities bestowed by the election are too grave to be manifested by exaltation.

The country faces a serious situation. There is profit neither to it nor to the victors in the election in dwelling on the fact that the country has elected a Democratic administration. The task ahead is to repair the damage, to get the ship of state back on even keel and to go ahead on a course which will bring us out of the tempest with the least disturbance and the greatest speed consistent with safety.

The Democratic party faces its duty with a firm determination to permit no thought of political advantage to avert it from the course that is best for the country. It has neither the time nor the desire to punish anybody or to exalt itself. To the extent of its ability it will steer the legislation of the nation in a straight line toward the goal of prosperity, nor permit itself to be diverted either by political expediency or a desire to show that it now dominates the enacting branch of the Government.

Not an Obstructive Congress. To this end the Seventy-second Congress will not be an obstructive body. It will not seek to embarrass the President of the United States, but will be glad to co-operate with him and with the members of the opposite party in the House and Senate in every measure that conduces to the welfare of the country.

It will welcome the assistance of every man, of every party or of no party, official or otherwise, who can contribute to the effort to make this country a happier place to live. It has in mind no rash policies, not an obstructive Congress.

HURLEY APPROVES USE OF ARMY COTS BY UNEMPLOYED

War Secretary, Replying to Illinois Governor, Takes Full Responsibility for Unauthorized Ruling.

IDLE ASKED TO SEEK JOBS AT HOME FIRST

Head of Hoover Committee Says This Will Stop Futile Migrations — Recheck of Industries.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Secretary Hurley announced today that all available army cots and blankets would be placed at the disposal of the unemployed to relieve acute distress this winter.

In the absence of legal authority to issue the equipment, the War Secretary said he would assume full responsibility. The decision was contained in a letter to Gov. Emmerson of Illinois, who had asked that the army lend cots and blankets and other army equipment in Illinois.

Chairman Woods of the President's committee on employment today urged jobless men and women to seek work at home first to limit what he described as futile labor migrations. Woods also announced a recheck of the unemployment census in selected areas was under consideration by a statistician, devising plans for complete information on the trend of unemployment in industries.

Orders to Manufacturers. Plans to order repair supplies from manufacturers for six months were reported to the unemployment committee by J. J. Drake, president of the Union Tank Car Co., Chicago. Drake reported repair materials at the company's shops had been reduced to a minimum.

"It is intended," he wrote, "to offer the manufacturers orders for six months—materials to be paid for when deliveries are made. We will, however, ask the manufacturers to guarantee us against decline in price for the coming six months."

Activities today followed upon the action of President Hoover yesterday in turning aside all discussion of the heavy political burdens entailed in election changes, and pointing to the immediate goal. "The job for the country now is to concentrate on measures of co-operation for economic recovery."

Chairman Woods in a radio appeal last night to the heads of all the nation's communities asked them to join in the drive.

Asks Officers for Facts. Woods asked Mayors and City Managers to give him facts, write in what specific measures they are employing in the fight on unemployment, what industries in their territory are doing and what joint efforts have been undertaken with private agencies.

The employment director saw some optimistic signs, among them the general response which made possible this year the most successful community chest campaign season in a long time. Reports showed this year's campaign had brought in 6.2 per cent more than a year ago. The goal for the drive was $12,458,251; the total reached in 1929 was $11,766,394.

Seven Democratic leaders, outlining their party's post-election stand, spoke of "a straight line toward the goal of prosperity," and of getting "out of the tempest with the least disturbance and the greatest speed consistent with safety."

Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader in the Senate, similarly urged that "whoever controls the next Congress, let us all join in a spirit of co-operation to bring back prosperity to the nation."

EMPLOYEE OF MISSING BANKER BOB FIXED HIS OWN SALARY

Testifies He Was Permitted to Draw as Much as He Thought Necessary to Live On.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A confidential employee of Charles V. Bob, missing stock promoter, told a referee in bankruptcy yesterday that for eight years he had been permitted to draw as much salary as he thought he needed for living expenses.

In addition, the employee, Walter J. Melody, testified, he was told he would be treated fairly by Bob and would be given blocks of stock in the promoter's various companies as they began to operate profitably. Melody testified he was president of the Consolidated Chromium Corporation, president of Golden Center Mines and secretary and treasurer of the Mineral Research Co., all Bob concerns. Until March, 1930, he said, his salary depended on how much his living expenses were. Then, he said, Frederick C. Russell, associate of Bob, who also was missing, decided his salary should be $1500 a month.

ONLY Farmer-Laborite in the upper house of Congress. As a result of Tuesday's elections it appears there will be 48 Republicans and 47 Democrats in the next Senate, with the Republicans in a position to call on the Republican Vice President to vote in case of tie. Senator Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa, said yesterday he would vote with the Democrats to organize the Senate if the Democratic program suited him. This would make Brookhart and Shipstead the determining factors of the session.

POLICE FIND HOUSEHOLD GOODS ARE GIVEN AS GAMBLING PRIZES

Warrants Sought Against Operators of Norco Game, Something Like Bingo.

Warrants charging setting up a gambling device were applied for by police today against Dee Lang, 4985 Wase avenue; his wife, Norma, and two employees, Homer Guilbor and John J. Sweeney, who operate a Norco game at 1452 Hodiamont avenue. The game, police said, is similar to Bingo and is a second cousin of Lotto. Prizes, according to the police, consist of kitchen utensils, blankets, quilts and groceries.

Two policemen who played the game Monday night testified they won, for $1.20, 10 pounds of sugar, an aluminum boiler and a glass lamp. Those arrested were released on bond.

In a poolroom at 217 North Channing avenue police arrested 17 chauffeurs gathered around a pool table on which the officers confiscated 75 cents and a pair of dice. The proprietor, who said he was Bert Lawler, 3234 Olive street, also was taken into custody.

At 3235 Olive street, police, who said they were investigating an anonymous telephone call at that address, arrested three men and a woman and destroyed six 10-gallon kegs of wine in the process of fermentation.

Two men charged with operation of a lottery were arrested in front of 5340 Natural Bridge avenue yesterday. Police found in their automobile several lottery tickets. The prisoners said they were Harry Lindsay, 11 Sunset court, St. Louis County, and Marion Cochran, 4108 Beechwood avenue, Pine Lawn.

TELLS OF HER ROMANCE WITH MAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

Chicago Divorcee Asserts Furtive Shot Her After Chasing She Shot Her After Chasing Her.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Vera Thompson, 24 years old, divorcee, last night told of her four-year romance with Samuel Bauer to policemen who had sought her all day after finding Bauer shot to death in his automobile.

Bauer, a furrier, married, with five children, had contributed to her support, she said, since the day she took a coat into his shop for repairs. Thursday night, while riding, he accused her of going out with other men. When she denied it, he drew a pistol and tried to shoot her.

She struggled with him, she said, and he pulled the trigger three times. One bullet went through a window of the car, one carried away two fingers of her left hand, and one struck her in the right side. She fainted, she said, recovering to find Bauer dead beside her, a bullet through his head.

She fled to her sister, got a doctor to dress her wounds, then registered under an assumed name at a North Side hotel. But the doctor reported her injuries, and her attorney surrendered her last night. Police Capt. Thomas Duffy said later that he believed the young woman's story and will recommend a verdict of suicide to the coroner's jury. Her wounds are serious, but not dangerous, he said.

Mrs. A. W. Johnson Loses $1500 Pin. A diamond pin, valued at $1500, was lost by Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson, 16 Portland place, last Sunday. It was found today following publication of an offer of a reward for its return. The pin was lost, it is thought, at Trails-End Stables, owned by Johnson and several business partners, or in Portland place. It is described as semi-circular, with baguette and round diamonds and small rubies. The pin was insured.

ATTORNEY HELD; TRIED TO DISPOSE OF STOLEN BONDS

$15,000 Securities Part of $1,000,000 Loot Taken in Daylight Holdup of Lincoln (Neb.) Bank.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Bonds identified as part of the $1,000,000 loot in the Lincoln National Bank holdup, in Lincoln, Neb., led to the arrest and detention in $5000 bail today of Franklin P. Ferguson, 41, an attorney, Ferguson, who was seized last night at the Harvard Club, was ordered detained by a Magistrate for hearing Nov. 13, on suspicion of connection with disposal of the bonds which daylight robbers obtained with the use of machine guns in the Western city.

The attorney had offered the bonds to Jepson, Tremaine & Co., securities brokers, in whose office he had desk room, and said a client wished to raise cash on them. There were 15 bonds in the packet, 10 of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and five of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. They were identified as part of the Lincoln loot when they were sent by Jepson, Tremaine & Co. to J. R. Smeltzer & Co., bond brokers, where a cashier checked their numbers. They were sent back to Jepson, Tremaine & Co. with word they had been stolen. The bonds were returned to Ferguson, who said he would take them back to the man who had given them to him to sell.

Tells of Meeting Broker. Police said he told them he met unexpectedly in Grand Central Terminal a friend, Raymond Sims, a security dealer in Boston, who told him he had $15,000 worth of bonds which had been entrusted to him to sell to settle an estate.

Ferguson said he offered to dispose of the bonds for Sims and agreed to meet him at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon with $15,000 in cash.

After being told the bonds were stolen, he said, he took them to a hotel and waited until Sims appeared at 6 p. m., when he demanded an explanation.

He said Sims went to a telephone booth, ostensibly to call the person from whom he had obtained the bonds, but when Ferguson looked for him he had disappeared taking the securities with him.

Second Arrest in Day. Police in the meantime had been notified and traced Ferguson to the Harvard Club. His arrest was the second yesterday in connection with attempts to sell securities stolen from the Lincoln bank.

Ferguson, who is a graduate of Harvard and Columbia Law Schools, was formerly an attorney for the American Locomotive Co. He is general counsel for the consolidated Dairy Products Co., in which he is a director and specializes in handling estates. He is married, has one child and lives on Park avenue.

Another Arrest for Attempted Sale of Stolen Bonds. By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 8.—The arrest in New York last night of Franklin P. Ferguson, an attorney, was the second in connection with attempts to dispose of bonds stolen from the Lincoln National Bank Sept. 17.

Dewey Berlovich, a Des Moines, Ia., bondman and paying company agent, is in custody and was questioned concerning $12,000 in bonds which he attempted to sell in Chicago. Police said the bonds were part of the $1,000,000 loot.

Sheriff W. O. Condit and Ben Danaban, a detective, were retained by the bank, said bonds to the amount of $23,500 had been recovered.

No charges have been filed against Berlovich, but police said he would be confronted by bank officers for possible identification. Berlovich maintained he was innocent of any participation in the robbery and said he did not know the bonds were stolen. He refused, however, to say where he had obtained them.

St. Paul Bond Broker Arrested for Mail Fraud. By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 8.—James A. Connolly, bond broker of St. Paul, was arrested here late yesterday for Federal authorities at New York City on charges of mail fraud growing out of the sale of alleged stolen bonds.

The warrant was issued here by Federal Judge John B. Sanborn at the request of George Heisey, Assistant United States District Attorney, following receipt of certified copies of an indictment.

Arraigned before Judge Sanborn, Connolly pleaded not guilty and was released on bond of $15,000, pending a hearing Nov. 18 on the Government's motion to remove him to New York.

Connolly is charged with using the mails to defraud two New York firms, the Atlantic Investors Corporation and the Earle A. Miller & Co., and others. He is charged with representing to these companies that he was in lawful possession of certain bonds and securities valued at $13,000, whereas it is alleged he knew the securities had been stolen.

In 1921, Connolly was charged with representing to the same companies that he was in lawful possession of certain bonds and securities valued at $13,000, whereas it is alleged he knew the securities had been stolen. In May this year, Connolly lost a suit in Minneapolis over ownership of $10,000 in bonds alleged to have been taken in a Toledo, O., mail robbery nine years ago.

ACTRESS MOURNS FOR SON TWO YEARS, THEN ENDS LIFE

Maude Clarke Found Dead of Poison in Costume Her Son Loved.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Joseph Homer Roberts' greatest thrill came from watching his mother, Maude Clarke, once of Broadway, prouette in her silver-spangled dancing costume. Two years ago Joseph, aged 7, died. His mother put away the costume that delighted Joseph, and danced no more.

But her husband, R. Homer Roberts, carried on behind the footlights. To an aunt's offer of a home she answered "he comes back to me more often when I'm alone" and she lived in solitude. Frequently fellow tenants heard her crying. Then for two days her room was silent. Investigating they found her, gliding again in the silver costume, dead. Nearby were three empty phials which had contained poison. They left it to the manager of an Elmyra (N. Y.) theater to notify her husband after last night's program was over.

Deed of Trust Forgery Charged. Suit to declare void a $5500 deed of trust on property at 2313-15 St. Louis avenue was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Reichers. They allege their signatures had been forged on the document and falsely certified by Arthur W. Obermeyer, real estate operator, who recently received a sentence of 12 years in the penitentiary based on fraudulent deeds of trust transactions.

AUTO USED IN $55,700 TRAIN ROBBERY FOUND

Abandoned Near California U. Campus After Holdup Near Nobel.

By the Associated Press. OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 8.—The sedan used by highwaymen who robbed a Southern Pacific mail car of $55,700 near Nobel yesterday was found today near the University of California campus in Berkeley. Berkeley police said they facilitated the robbers were hiding in Berkeley.

The police theory is that, after the robbery, which was one of the most daring and spectacular in the West in recent years, the outlaws went to a private garage, removed their loot, left the sedan and took another car. It is thought one of the gang or some ally drove the car to the campus district and abandoned it during the night.

The dispatch with which the robbers worked indicated they were familiar with the transportation of valuable registered mail and the shipments which the train carried when it left Oakland at 7 a. m. on its daily run to Tracy.

One of the robbers, armed and masked, who apparently had boarded the train at Berkeley, made his way to the locomotive as it approached Nobel and ordered Engineer R. E. Lemery to stop. There the robber's companions, armed with automatic rifles, pistols and sawed-off shotguns, waited in a stolen automobile. The entire train was immediately covered and a shot—the only one fired—was sent into the mail car with the command to "open up."

Methodically the men looted the mail car, passing the mail and money to the waiting automobile. The principal loot was the $55,700 consigned by the Federal Reserve Bank to the American Trust Co. branch at Pittsburg. The money was to meet payroll checks of the Columbia Steel Works Co. The workers were not paid because of the robbery.

The robbers missed $85,000 on the train for Oakland suburban banks. Scarcely 15 minutes after the train had stopped, the robbers sped away in the automobile. Passengers were not molested nor was baggage disturbed.

A sack containing $1000 in cash, an empty mail sack which had been slashed open, and the pistol and holster taken from the mail clerk were found near the scene. The same train was held up a year ago in the same manner, allegedly by the gang of Jake Pileagle, notorious outlaw who was recently killed at Branson, Mo.

HERITZA SUES AUTHOR CHARGING DEFAMATION

Singer Alleges Book "Riff-Raff," Published in Vienna, Lampoons Her.

By the Associated Press. VIENNA, Nov. 8.—Maria Heritza, an actress, today filed a suit against Dr. Muller Goebmann, Austrian writer, because of alleged defamation of her husband, Baron von Goebmann, in his book of that title.

The action is being handled by M. Heritza's attorney, the well-known lawyer Dr. Muller Goebmann, who is also her husband's attorney. The book, "Riff-Raff," she charges of defamation of her husband, Baron von Goebmann, in his book of that title.

"Riff-Raff" portrays a hold constantly embroiled in litigation. The soprano, though, her pending publication, might refer to her own husband and obtained an injunction against its publication while it was in the press. The proofs were referred to a censor who considered two passages which Dr. Goebmann revised. Thursday the book with the revised sections, was published and M. Heritza immediately instituted proceedings for confiscation of the book and arrest of the author on defamation charges.

Coach Clarence A. "Stub" Muhr, University City Indians, secured another scalp to their football string, when they defeated Wellston, 12 to 0 yesterday afternoon on the Wellston field. The game closed a County League season for University City and assured it of at least a tie for the championship with four victories and no defeats. The most rampant redskin was Mel Meisel, who was converted from an end into a halfback because Alvin Feldman and Emil Kovacs, regular backs, were out in injuries. Meisel didn't carry a ball in the first quarter, but in the second period he snared a pass from Harry Deckert and ran 38 yards for the second touchdown. Monty Johnson began the scalp of Coach Muhr's Indians by kicking a 23-yard line. Deckert passed to Bob Stewart for the first point and plunged through in the second quarter to make the score 14 to 0.

Meisel At It Again. Three first downs at the start of the second half put Johnson in position to score his second touchdown. Deckert place-kicked the ball in the first quarter, but in the second period he snared a pass from Harry Deckert and ran 38 yards for the second touchdown. Monty Johnson began the scalp of Coach Muhr's Indians by kicking a 23-yard line. Deckert passed to Bob Stewart for the first point and plunged through in the second quarter to make the score 14 to 0.

Wellston threatened in the fourth quarter when C. Houston intercepted a pass on University City's 16-yard line. Wellston made a touchdown, but the Indians held on to a one-foot line and Deckert punted out of danger.

The game was scouted by Oak University City officials. University City meets the Chicago suburb team here on Nov. 22 and if Oak does not cripple the Indians, it is likely that a game will be scheduled with Normandy to be played Dec. 6. Normandy is tied with University City for the league lead.

OUTBOARD MOTOR Race Conditions To Be Simplified

Simplification of outboard racing so that drivers, spectators and manufacturers may benefit was recommended by members of the outboard division of the American Power Boat Association who held their annual meeting in New York, Oct. 28.

The public has been more than a little mystified this year at just how the outboard racing was to be run. The two divisions would in the various divisions of drivers, which totaled four and, if the National Outboard Racing Commission accepts the advice which will be proffered by the A. P. B. A. representatives, the racing divisions will be cut to two.

As in golf, the amateurs would accept trophy prizes and the professionals cash prizes.

Yards to the Army 32-yard line. A bad pass from center cost 11 yards, but Berry's pass to Tanusius carried to the Cadet 25-yard line. Illinois couldn't complete another toss, however, and Army took the ball on downs on her own 35-yard mark.

Army tried a long pass from her own 35 and Tanusius intercepted. For Illinois back to midfield and back to Army's 45-yard line. Plunges carried to the Cadet 40-yard marker, but Berry's pass fell into the arms of Stecker, Army backfield sub, on her own 35-yard line. Army plunged, kicked to midfield to relieve the pressure.

Third Quarter. Two hard-bitten lines, with great and play on both sides held offense down to a minimum early in the third quarter and both Army and Illinois kicked to midfield. The ball shuttled back between the two 20-yard lines with the warriors waiting for a break in the luck.

Army finally got to rolling with Tom Kilday, substituting for Herb, in the driver's seat as Army plunged from her own 48 to the Illinois 20-yard marker despite a 15-yard penalty for holding. A long pass, Stecker to Kling, made up the penalty.

The Army power was irresistible and Illinois crumbled before the drive of Kling and Stecker, the latter tearing around his right end for the final eight yards and a touchdown. Cy Letzelter promptly kicked the goal and Army led 7 to 0.

Army came pounding down the field again, splitting through the Cadet line and driving from the Cadet 34-yard line to Illinois' 45, but a pass from Stecker was intercepted by Hall just as the period ended on the visitors' 35-yard line.

Fourth Quarter. Early in the fourth quarter Tom Kilday was hurt and the Army drive seemed to leave with him. Kicks shuttled the ball back and forth between the 30-yard lines with Bodman for Illinois and Stecker for Army, engaging in a pretty duel.

Roy Carver, at quarter for Army in place of Bodman, turned in a brilliant individual feat, tucking away one of Bodman's punts on his own 35-yard line and circling the enemy until he was within 10 yards of the Illinois 20-yard line. Illinois passed failed, however, and penalties helped give Illinois the ball on their own 40-yard line. Illinois went to the air in a desperate effort to score.

MODEL OF RIVER DES PERES TUNNEL INTAKE

This one-fortieth scale model of the upper end of the River des Peres drainage works, as it will be built, was made by city engineers to study the flow of storm water. The view is towards the east, with a model of Eastgate avenue in the foreground and Skinker avenue in the background, the city limits being in between. The water shown represents the 3000-cubic-feet-a-second record flow of the 1913 flood, when, lacking control, the river inundated much of the city. From the unimproved earth channel in University City, the stream will drop 26 feet through an inclined concrete trough as it approaches the sewer whose arch has a width of 32 feet at the base.

IN and Minnie Moviefan, husband and wife, may take little trip back home to see the folks in the city on business, unaccompanied by the other—but when movie star does the same thing are immediate rumors of divorce.

movie husband and wife must agree literally at all times and in a way, if they are to get gossip of separation. Recently Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett started on a vacation trip, and was scarcely on her way before she was being called on for a bit of domestic trouble. "We separated," she laughed. "We separated that," he laughed. "We separated that," he laughed. "We separated that," he laughed.

OST movie stars find it impossible to exist without a private swimming pool, but Marie Dressler prefers a garden to a pool. She gave up her home in Los Angeles and took another garden space so she could have flowers.

Harding and Harry Bannister have the highest pool of all stars. Their home crowns the peak of the Hollywood hills, and they swim at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

climbing out of the water early—Buster Keaton at last is getting the little frame cottage in his studio in favor of a regular bungalow on the lot. But it will be a simple and practical affair, featuring a training room for the acrobatic comic can rehearse the ministrations of his vaudeville act.

FORCE in Hollywood doesn't always mean an end to friendship, and very seldom does a rupture entail a public row such as that triangular affair recently exclusive movieland ballroom. Betty Compson has worked as in two or three of the pictures directed and produced by her husband, James Cruze, and seem to be better friends than ever.

LOVE at first sight, as exemplified in the romance of a vaudeville actor now in pictures, is met her first in her dressing room at the theater where they were both playing, after he had gone in to inquire about some detail of the order of the act.

She stared at him. "Don't you take off your hat in a lady's dressing room?" she asked witheringly. "Yeah," he growled, "point her out!"

ROTHY LEE and so (some later) they were married—have lived happily ever since.

ANOTHER movie team, risen to screen fame together, is to be split and put before the box office as independent attractions. Wheeler, whose team mate has Robert Woolsey, is to appear in one more picture, with Dorothy Lee as co-star, while Woolsey continues his cinematic way.

Lee is the little comedienne debuting in "Sensational," one of the first talkies, and continued films as the ingenue in numerous Wheeler-Woolsey pictures. The projected change means, to an elevation, but what it will do to the comedienne remains to be seen.

the past, when screen teams separated for individual stardom usually only one member has lived the split and remained a office power.

DAILY STORY FOR CHILDREN

By Mary Graham Bommer

Master Aoudad Sheep

THE creature was standing on a high rock in his yard in the soo and John and Peggy stood outside the yard and called up to him. "Hello," John said, "don't you want to talk to me?" "Yes," said the creature, "I do, but I'd like you to talk to me, too." "What is your name?" John asked.

"My name is Master Aoudad, because I belong to the fine aoudad family. Another family name is that of Barbary wild sheep, but I like the name of aoudad better." "Before I came to the soo my home was in the mountains of the north part of the continent of Africa. It was very hot there, but I do not complain of my weather."

"He had splendid, curved horns, and shaggy hair down his front. Now he was standing in one position and then changing to another as though he thought he were very fine." "Do you think I'm handsome?" he asked. "Very," said John. "Then say so," the aoudad urged. "I did," John answered. "But say so some more," the aoudad begged.

"I think you're very handsome. Indeed you're a fine creature. You look strong and well, and you take fine positions on that rock." The aoudad seemed very much pleased. "I may be conceited about my looks, but at least I'm a healthy animal and cause no trouble and I never grumble about the weather. But tell me, John, do you offer your sister food before you eat yourself?" John and Peggy looked at each other in surprise. But then they decided it was because he was going to lecture John a little on good manners. John waited a moment before he gave his answer.

Is Not Ready for Trans-

SOME MEMBERS
FOR MODIFICATION

Indications Are Others
Want Outright Repeal,
While Remainder Insist
18th Amendment Stand.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Although the Wickersham Commission on Law Enforcement said today that it had reached no conclusions on prohibition "which are ripe for publication," there were reliable indications that the Commission is preparing to recommend fundamental changes in the national prohibition laws, and that it may advise modification of the eighteenth amendment.

Today's statement was prompted by the appearance of various newspaper stories purporting to forecast the date of the commission's report and the nature of its recommendations. The statement, issued by Chairman Wickersham, declared the commission could not say when its report would be ready, since some phases of its investigation are not completed. It added that when the report is ready it will be sent to President Hoover, and that any announcement concerning its contents must come from him.

The fact is, it was learned today, that the commission is having serious difficulty drafting a report which a majority of the 11 members is willing to sign. In the first place some of the members favor outright repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and their position has been considerably strengthened by the outcome of Tuesday's elections. However, a majority of the commission is opposed to such a recommendation.

Majority for Changes.

On the other hand, it seems certain that a majority is dissatisfied with the present laws and is willing to recommend a change. Several favor an amendment to the Constitution, modifying the eighteenth amendment, but whether a majority can be mustered in support of a recommendation to that effect remains in doubt. Indeed, it appears to be one of the main difficult issues.

Members of the commission have assumed, in recent discussions, that a majority might agree to recommend modification of the amendment, but thus far they have not said to the scope of the proposed recommendation. Some, for example, are reported to favor amendment that would merely permit the legalizing of home-made wine and beer, while others are said to advocate a change that would let the states to dispense not only wine and beer, but also spirits, while still others favor private manufacture and sale under a system of strict Government control.

Considered in connection with the fact that some of the members are for outright repeal, and that some are opposed to any vital change in the present laws, the foregoing may suggest some idea of the difficulty which the commission faces in its effort to draft a formula that will command the support of a majority of its members.

If a majority report is finally reached on, there is every likelihood that it will be accompanied not only by a minority report, but also by statements setting forth supplemental or qualifying views of several individual members.

The truth is that among the 11 members there are almost 11 different views of the situation, and most of them are strongly held. This may not indicate very clearly what the ultimate outcome will be, but it is an accurate picture of the present situation.

Some Favor Modification.

The facts which stand out most conspicuously are that a majority of the members favor changes in the present laws, and that a substantial number favors repeal or amendment of the eighteenth amendment. It is assumed that the minority favoring repeal can be induced to recommend modification.

It became known in recent days that the commission had asked chemists in the Department of Agriculture and elsewhere to state what, in their opinion, constituted a percentage of alcohol which could be defined as "intoxicating in
